DISCUSSION: The Director, Texas Service Center, denied the employment-based immigrant visa petition. The matter is now before the Administrative Appeals Office (AAO) on appeal. The AAO will summarily dismiss the appeal.

The petitioner seeks classification pursuant to section 203(b)(2) of the Immigration and Nationality Act (the Act), 8 U.S.C. § 1153(b)(2), as a member of the professions holding an advanced degree. The petitioner seeks employment as a research scientist. The petitioner asserts that an exemption from the requirement of a job offer, and thus of a labor certification, is in the national interest of the United States. The director found that the petitioner qualifies for classification as a member of the professions holding an advanced degree, but that the petitioner has not established that an exemption from the requirement of a job offer would be in the national interest of the United States.

8 C.F.R. § 103.3(a)(1)(v) states, in pertinent part, “[a]n officer to whom an appeal is taken shall summarily dismiss any appeal when the party concerned fails to identify specifically any erroneous conclusion of law or statement of fact for the appeal.”

On the Form I-290B Notice of Appeal, counsel checked a box reading “My brief and/or additional evidence is attached.” Counsel did not indicate that a future supplement would follow. Therefore, the initial appellate submission constitutes the entire appeal. The petitioner submitted no exhibits on appeal except for a copy of the denial notice.

The Form I-290B includes a space for the petitioner to “[p]rovide a statement explaining any erroneous conclusion of law or fact in the decision being appealed.” In a one-sentence statement, counsel states: “The record reflects . . . that a waiver of the labor certification process would be in the national interest.”

In an accompanying statement, counsel acknowledges that the scientific societies to which the petitioner belongs do not require outstanding achievements, but states that “this is the norm.” The director, however, did not raise the issue of the petitioner’s memberships as a basis for denial. Counsel further asserts generally that the petitioner’s publication record, leading roles and judging experience distinguish him from his peers, but counsel does not allege any specific factual or legal errors in the director’s decision.

Because the petitioner has failed to identify specifically an erroneous conclusion of law or a statement of fact as a basis for the appeal, the AAO must summarily dismiss the appeal.

The AAO notes the approval of a more recent petition that an intending employer filed on the alien’s behalf, on September 15, 2010. The petition included an approved labor certification. The director approved that petition on September 21, 2010.

ORDER: The appeal is dismissed.
